Winter Study Tour Is Filling Up

by Ed Fitzgerald

For the third consecutive year the UNO/UNL Travel Offices are offering students, faculty and staff the opportunity to study abroad.

Credit is being given for 19 different courses on the European Study Tour during the semester break this winter.

The tour has been divided into two separate flights. The first flight leaves Omaha on December 26 for Munich and Rome. All persons on this flight will meet in Paris for the return flight to Omaha on January 13.

The second flight leaves Lincoln on December 28, for London and returns from there to Lincoln on January 13.

The course that the individuals sign up for designates the flight they will be on.

The prices range between $440 and $600, and include: round-trip transportation from Lincoln or Omaha by chartered jets; housing and breakfast in tourist class hotels or student-type housing; tuition; other course-related costs such as transportation, excursions, entrance fees, theater tickets, airport transfers; supplemental health and accident insurance; and all administrative costs.

Jim Meier, Director of the UNO Student Center Travel Office, stated that although he had just started accepting reservations last week, "there are already two classes full."

According to Meier, the travel office was established in the fall of '71 with the help of the Lincoln campus. A joint-intercampus committee has been formed to coordinate the European Travel Tours.

The two major functions of the travel office

Meier said are, "To organize and coordinate study tours, both here in the U.S. and Internationally, and also to help in aiding and providing literature to students who want to travel by themselves."

When asked how particular courses are selected, Meier said, "An instructor submits a request to the committee. It is then acted upon and if accepted, it is included and the program is set up."

The advantages of the tour were described by Meier as being "a more personal experience."

"The group gets to see things as they (the Europeans) see them, hear things as they hear them, etc.," Meier said.

He went on to say, "Travel could be a supplement to our five senses, even a sixth sense."

Meier said the opportunity of just getting out in the world is another advantage. "There is more going on in this world than having trouble finding a parking space. Most Americans know how to make a living, but not how to live," Meier said.

The eligibility requirements for the tours include all students currently enrolled at the university with the exception of those taking only correspondence courses. Also included are the faculty and staff currently employed by the universities and the spouses, parents, and dependent children of the students, faculty and staff if accompanied by the eligible relative.

Only those registering for course credit may participate in the study tours, but persons can sign up for the flight only.

Self-Awareness to Be Goal of Workshops

The Job Placement and Career Development Office will sponsor Life Planning Workshops on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27 and 29.

According to Student Counselor Bob Allamand, the workshops are designed to involve the individual in the process of influencing his own future.

"We want to make the student aware of his influence on his own life," Allamand said, "instead of thinking that things only happen to him."

In the life Planning

Workshops, he said, the individual is actively engaged in the processes of self-identification and group interaction.

Hopefully, he continued, by the end of the workshop session, the individual will have increased self-awareness, and will realize the need for a specific, but flexible, plan of action related to reaching his future goals.

The workshops each last for six hours. The first three days, Sept. 24-26, the workshops will run from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Thursday there will be two sessions; noon until 6:00 p.m. and 3:00 to 9:00 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 29, the session will again run from 9:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. All sessions will be held on MBSC third floor.

Each workshop will be broken down into various activities including the identification and stripping of roles, fantasy time, life inventory and goal setting.

Anyone interested can contact the Job Placement Office.

SPO Rejects Funding of Black Homecoming

by Dick Ulmer

A proposal for a $4,000 black homecoming was turned down by the Student Programming Organization's decision-making board Tuesday.

BLAC president Leroy Powell's request received stiff opposition, some of which came from a surprise source. That source was SPO board member Heshimu Iverri who issued a statement blasting the proposed concert as "both selfish and counter-productive." Iverri is also a BLAC member and a student senator.

The SPO gathering decided to allow BLAC to contract an opening act to appear before the Buddy Miles Express in lieu of using student funds for BLAC's Thursday evening event.

Powell has vowed that black homecoming will continue with or without SPO money. If it does, another day will have been added to the homecoming weekend which is planned to proceed as follows:

Thursday, Oct. 11 — Black homecoming dance and coronation sponsored and financed by BLAC. Music has not yet been planned.

Friday, Oct. 12 — Homecoming dance. A group selected by BLAC will be followed by the Buddy Miles Express. Coronation of homecoming king and queen will also take place.

Saturday, Oct. 13 — Homecoming football game with Northern Colorado. Homecoming royalty will be presented at halftime. A dance featuring Bittersweet will follow the game.

Honor Frat Arrives At UNO

One of America's fastest growing fraternities wants to establish a chapter at UNO.

Sigma Nu's national assistant executive secretary Bob Carpenter was on campus earlier this week to help get things off the ground.

More pledges

Carpenter says his fraternity "had more pledges last year than ever before" and pointed out that one reason for this is Sigma Nu's move toward more commuter campuses such as UNO. He noted, "We're not one of the fraternities that think a fraternity is a house."

A large number of alumni in the area and a strong sister chapter at UNL were reasons cited by Carpenter for Sigma Nu's desire to gain a foothold here.

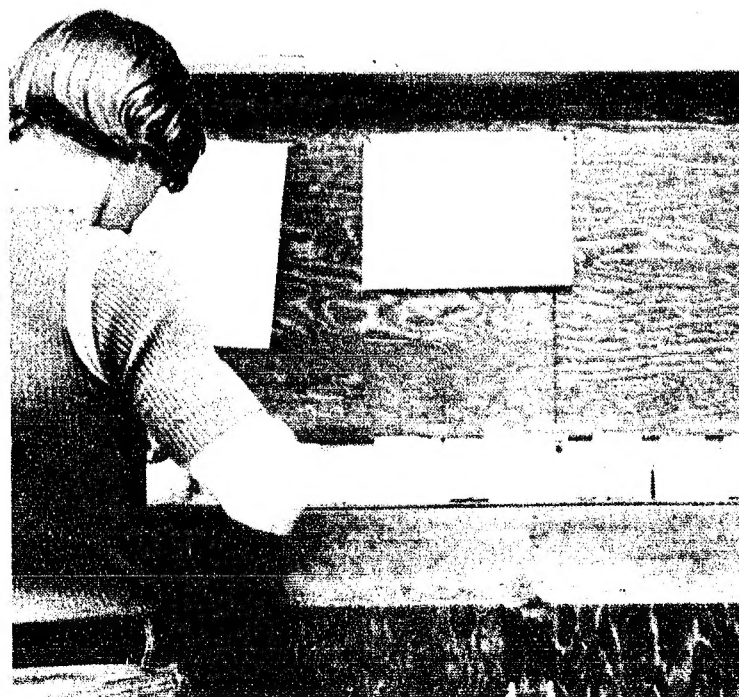

Honor Fraternity

He revealed that Sigma Nu is an honorary fraternity and that all action taken by its members is completely voluntary. He claims the fraternity has "no fines, no required attendance and uses no coercion."

What Sigma Nu does have, according to Carpenter, is a meaningful community outreach-community service program plus intramural and social activities.

Information Table

Carpenter states he has already talked to three people interested in joining the fraternity and a table manned by UNL members of the organization has been set-up in the student center.

Quite a number of students have as yet not picked up their Student Identification Cards. These cards are needed in order to be admitted to student sponsored activities and can be picked up at the information desk, first floor, MBSC.

Editorial

Senate Needs Follow-through

Some Student Senators have been very vocal during their weekly meetings so far this fall concerning the power of the Student Senate.

Stirring statements have been made, voices have been raised and resolutions have been passed as the senators loudly and vigorously stand up for the "students' rights."

After a meeting of table pounding and political oratory the Senate passes a resolution condemning some departments of the Administration and a "now we'll show 'em" smile spreads across the legislators' faces.

However, the Senate's efforts seem to cease after the resolution is passed, duly recorded by the secretary and filed away somewhere to be forgotten.

What happened to the resolution condemning graduation fees? A Regents meeting was held the day after the meeting in which this resolution was passed. Not a question was raised as the Regents quietly approved the fees.

What happened to the resolution condemning the raising of parking fines? The situation may be under study by a Senate committee, but in the meantime the Gateway has been informed by Campus Security that the new fines will become effective shortly.

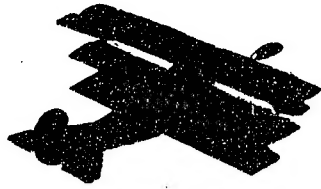

The problem seems to lie in the lack of any set mechanism for the carrying out of Senate wishes. The Constitution of the Students of UNO which authorizes the student government does not spell out any responsibilities.

Article II, Section Five gives the powers of the Legislative Branch including the power to petition the University Senate, the Chancellor, the President of the Board of Regents, or any person, agency, or department within or without the University for redress of grievances.

However, any action taken by the Senate on a passed resolution must rely on the interest of an individual Senator to follow up on that resolution.

Article III, Section Three of the Constitution tells of the Powers of the Student Body President. But it does not tell of any responsibilities he has to the Legislative Branch as an enforcer of their wishes.

It seems some structured means of follow-through is needed if Student Senate actions are to mean anything. Either the Legislative Branch must take it upon itself to carry out the wishes of its members or it should instruct the Executive Branch to fulfill that obligation.

STAN CARTER'S

RICH THOUGHTS

PRICK! COCK! SUCK! SCREW! BITE! BALL! DICK! LAY! BLOW! QUEER! CRAP! DAM! MOTHER!

At last! I knew I'd finally sneak something past the editors! The reason you are actually reading the above hard-hitting, free-wheeling Super Filth is that any lock can be picked, including that at a printers. I have snuck in during the night, and am re-typesetting my column, and in the morning the presses will roll, no one the wiser! If you're reading this, you know if I was successful. Someone's coming! I'd better stop typing now and shut off this linotype.

Actually, the words in the first paragraph are perfectly acceptable, decent, clean words. I prick my thumb, I cock the pistol, I suck on the straw, screw driver, bite to eat, foot ball, Dick Cavett, Lay's potato chips, "Well blow me down," sez Popeye, "That's queer!" exclaimed Dr. Watson, shooting craps, Beaver Dam (I missed one!), Mother's Day.

That's the meaning I intended for those words. If you derived another, I'm terribly sorry but you really should watch your language!

But the point is, it's the context. It's those other words that wrap themselves around my words in sentences and upset people. But how come sex words are bad, but RAPE! WAR! KILL! MURDER! ECT! are perfectly acceptable? Is it worse to — a willing woman, or rape an unwilling victim? And how come they complain about the language, but every night, there they are, right between 'em and without any more respectful intentions than the words they object to?

But moving on to the past, as historians say, I would like to point out that my prediction on the Nebraska-UCLA game was closer than the World-Herald or the Sun.

As you recall, we won 40 to 13. I predicted 31 to 7. The World-Herald predicted 24 to 17, and the Sun said 24 to 13. I came within three points of the margin of victory, while the Herald was off by 20, the Sun by 16. As for the score, I gave Nebraska nine too few, UCLA six too few. The Herald was off by sixteen points and four points, respectively. The Sun was also off by sixteen points, though they hit UCLA's score right on the nose guard. Considering that Sports Illustrated is spouting nonsense about Texas Number One!, there seems to be only one reliable predictacaster around, eh?

I want to thank Coach Osborne for the telegram I'm sure he'll be sending me any day now saying "Stan, many thanks for inspiring my team to greatness. We couldn't have done it without you."

I also predict UNO will have an undefeated season, but we will lose to Jackson State by a score of 17 to 0.

But enough about football. On to the Red Barren File (soon to be out in paperback at City News and Book, 412 South 16th).

It seems that the monocoque fuselage was deemed superior due to the frame shell, despite the fact that flight purists argued that birds had feathers and feet. So one was constructed, made from glazed clay baked in a kiln. Unfortunately, despite its porosity, it shattered upon impact with the ground during a test flight ("Test Flight AX3" copyright 1094 by U.S. Government Printing Office, Patent Division, Pamphlet Section. All codes apply.)

The great aerialist, Lamont, attempted to control the movement with twine, which caused his death.

Therefore the B-1 Bomber should not be built. Sources: "Registered Flights, 1904." U.S. Government Printing Office Patent Division Pamphlet Section says this pamphlet is out of print for 16 cents.

LETTERS

Rah-Rah Retreat

Dear Student Body,

This letter is addressed to the student body, not the editor because I feel all of us should be concerned with this matter.

In the Sept. 7, Gateway it was reported that the Student Senate planned a "retreat." The bill for this "retreat" will come to $700. Where and how they acquired this money is what angers me.

The Student Senate had no right (or at least my approval) to give my name to a life insurance company or to anyone else.

Some of the distinguished senators can miss anywhere from one to seven meetings, but I'll wager none miss this "retreat." Maybe they should invite the student body, since we are the ones who financed the little party.

When an elected body infringes on the rights of the people who elected them, without approval, that elected body should be removed or at the very least severely reprimanded.

Douglas Bishop

Parkers' Party

Students,

The Student Senate has once again illustrated its unique talent for irresponsible decision making. Appropriating $700 to President Parker's "party fund" is by no means a responsible decision.

The Senate has been clamouring for more control of student fees. However, the apparent, "self-interest" appropriation for a two-and-a-half day party puts the senate's ability to responsibly use those funds in a different light.

Perhaps the administration is spending student funds, but probably not for parties at student expense.

Parker and his cohorts should submit an itemized account of the proposed expenses to the student body so we all know exactly what's going on.

A BLAC RATIONALE

To the people,

I feel that at this time, it is imperative or very much necessary that I explain my reasons for voting NO on the funding for Black Homecoming entertainment.

Goal-Oriented

Based upon the assumption that all human behavior is goal-oriented, and that individuals and collective groups are continually faced with alternative courses of action, one may hypothesize that an individual or group will choose from among the alternatives available the one that he or they perceives best achieves the goals.

The decisions an individual or group makes, then, will depend upon their personal value system — the set of beliefs, attitudes, and values disposes them to behave in a certain fashion.

Being a Black man and a member of BLAC, many Black students will feel that I have betrayed BLAC because of my decision to reject this proposal, therefore the forthcoming explanation.

Subjective and Selfish

I feel that asking SPO to fund entertainment for the Black Homecoming is both subjective and selfish on the part of BLAC leadership. Subjective because it was not developed through objective rational thinking on the part of the collective organization, therefore a dismissal of a quantitative or qualitative analysis. This rationale was very much in evidence last week, when the avaricious Bachelor Enterprise Inc. co-sponsored the Jackson State Dance without the consultation or the will of the people.

Counter-productive Concert

With as many problems as we Black Students have on this campus, it is both selfish and counter-productive to fund a concert, the day before a big concert consisting of Buddy Miles Express and Weather Report, particularly when we have so many positive objectives we could accomplish with these particular funds.

We must also remember that the school year is in its infancy. I hope that BLAC is thinking in terms of the rest of the year, such as Black Heritage Week, various community projects, lecturers, etc.

Facsimile Event

If Black imbeciles want to have an autonomous homecoming that is a facsimile of the white homecoming, that is their business. But understand one thing, this is very much an antagonistic contradiction to Black Liberation. How can you liberate yourself from something you want to be? What are you coming home to?

I would urge BLAC to incorporate the Buddy Miles concert in conjunction with their homecoming, and, to remember their name — BLACK LIBERATORS FOR ACTION ON CAMPUS.

To the people with love,
Heshimu Iverri
SPO and BLAC member

Spearman contentedly chews on his pipe at Student Senate meeting although he claims being discontented with faculty-student relations.

Spearman, Casper: Senior Reps

by Dick Ulmer

This series of articles is being written in an effort to better acquaint students with their representatives on the Student Senate.

The senior class representatives in the Student Senate are both "proud of UNO." Johnnie Spearman and J.C. Casper also are in the same college — the College of Public Affairs and Community Service (CPACS), but that's where the similarities between the two end.

Not Sounding Board

Spearman is a Bootstrapper who was elected to the Senate for the first time last spring. Although he says his ideas are much the same as those of Student Body President Dave Parker (another Boot), he claims, "I'm not a sounding board for the president."

He chose UNO over two other universities when he first entered the Army's Bootstrap program because its criminal justice department "was third-best in the nation at the time." Since arriving Spearman hasn't changed his view, he believes UNO has "interested people, a good location and a pretty campus."

As Big as UNL

His goal as a Senator is to help improve UNO, he says, "I would like to see UNO as big a name as UNL, if not bigger."

Spearman recently sponsored a resolution which would compel faculty and staff to pay for their parking privileges. He explains, "Faculty are just as much a part of this university as any one else . . . but I'm against faculty and staff getting things for free."

Fees Important

What does Spearman think the important issues facing the Senate are? He calls student fees "an important question that we should get legal help on." He sees faculty-student relations as another big problem.

Spearman has several pet projects he would like to see the Senate act on. Among them are: a complete review of the student government budget, a program to give students more input to academic programs and a professional counseling service.

Not Apathetic

Above and beyond all else, he thinks the university needs a program with the goal of "educating the student body about the services and activities provided them." He says, "Students are not apathetic, they're just not aware."

J. C. Casper disagrees. He is "ashamed of UNO's students" because of their lack of involvement. During his four years on the Senate, Casper feels he has often represented a "radical" point of view. It is a lack of such radicals in the student body that he thinks is the cause of apathy. He says, "The Greeks are about the only power on campus and they're such a tiny minority."

Campus Fixture

Casper has been a fixture around UNO for quite some time. During that time, he has held a lot of jobs here and made a lot of enemies.

Speaking of Dave Parker, Casper charges, "I'd call him a sell-out to the administration, but you can't sell your soul if its theirs already."

What does Casper see as the most important issue ahead for the Senate? He is most concerned about student rights. He says, "This campus needs a lawyer worse than anything." He also would "like to see Student Government incorporate so it can legally represent the students and sue more easily."

Holding Fees

Casper sees UNO's increase in enrollment as the root of a future problem. He claims that the administration was planning for a drop in enrollment and that it now is holding approximately $37,000 extra in student fees.

He says, "BLAC (Black Liberators for Action on Campus) think they're going to get their hands on those funds, but they're wrong."

According to Casper, what the Senate needs most right now "is a head-on crisis with the administration over student rights."

Student senators will be eating at a special table in the cafeteria every Thursday from 11:30 to 1:30. Students are invited to converse with them.

Forbes Ready to Help

by Gary Morris

Roughly translated from Scandinavian origins Ombudsman means "man of the people." UNO's Ombudsman Frank Forbes, an attorney, said the office is sort of "a counsel for the people. My job consists of helping to cut red tape; this office is here to try and help solve problems."

Any member of the student body, faculty, or staff can walk into the Ombudsman office and request service, Forbes said. The office was established at UNO in the fall of 1970. Art professor Tom Majeski was Ombudsman the first year and Forbes has had the job since.

People can go to the Ombudsman office when they feel they've been the victim of an unfair practice. Forbes then goes to work to determine whether or not an injustice has occurred. Requests for Forbes' services usually come when the normal bureaucratic processes have failed to function properly.

"This office is not just a short cut," said Forbes. "We initially attempt to resolve all problems through the existing channels."

Forbes stressed that the Ombudsman office has no power except to recommend. The Ombudsman is appointed by the Board of Regents and is directly responsible to the Chancellor's office. However, Forbes said, the Ombudsman is independent — not considered part of the administration.

He is often able to suggest procedures to get at the source of problems. "We want the people of the UNO community to realize that they can come here and not be treated like a number." He reported that the response has been terrific.

"I've received 100 per cent cooperation from the people I've asked for help and about 90 per cent of the ones seeking aid have been satisfied," said Forbes.

It's important to realize that the door to this office is open to anyone at UNO, he said. The Ombudsman conducts an impartial service investigating through the established administrative processes. "I make sincere attempts to bring equity to anyone that brings a grievance to the Ombudsman office," Forbes said.

"Rules for the masses are necessary but they must be interpreted on an individual level," he said.

Movie Review

Sometimes A Great Notion

SPO's movie tonight isn't as entertaining as last week's Slaughterhouse Five, but it's worth the 25¢ admission.

I wouldn't recommend you break a date in order to see it, nor would I urge you to rush out and pay three dollars for a ticket at a commercial movie house — but it's not a completely boring way to spend an evening.

Sometimes a Great Notion has an excellent cast, but none delivers a performance approaching his or her potential.

Paul Newman, Henry Fonda, Lee Remick and Michael Sarrazin sleepwalk through their roles effortlessly. They deliver their lines competently, like the professionals they are, but with little emotional range.

The movie has several other factors going for it. It is based on a novel by Ken Kesey (One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest), was produced by Carl Foreman (The Guns of Navarone), and the music is by Henry Mancini, featuring the singing of Charley Pride.

In spite of the abundance of talent, the movie never quite gets off the ground. The fault, in this situation, must lie with the director.

Apparently Paul Newman is a better actor than a director, although he may improve with experience — if he gets another chance after a box-office bomb like this.

Newman's performance ranks with his worst — I'd call it a tie with his portrayal in Torn Curtain, his previous all-time low.

He takes a role that's perfect for the Paul Newman image — a strong-minded, laconic, brusquely masculine outdoorsman, who does things his way and to hell with the rest of the world — and plays it with a blandness that's hard to believe unless you see it.

Whether he's brawling with a lumberjack, crying for his best friend who just drowned in front of his eyes, or watching his father die, he displays the same limited emotional range — boredom.

Actually, his expression probably reflects preoccupation rather than boredom. He gives the impression of a man who's not concentrating on his performance, thinking about how he's going to set up the next scene.

It's doubtful that it's possible for a man to both act in and direct the same picture and do a good job at both. The only successful example that comes to mind is Orson Welles' Citizen Kane, and even an extraordinary talent like Welles has had more failures than successes.

Perhaps the old axiom, "A man who defends himself has a fool for a lawyer," applies equally well to the case of a man who directs himself.

The movie has its good points. The music is good. The action scenes are good. The plot moves along with good pacing and seldom drags.

The story is a poignant one — the decline and fall of the Stamper family, the last of the rugged individualist on America's northwest frontier, in the logging country of Oregon.

The tragedy of the Stammers is that through the generations they have evolved such hard shells in order to survive their harsh environment and occupation, they are unable to deal with the rest of society and the twentieth century on successful terms.

When Henry Fonda, the patriarch of the clan, calls a union organizer a "pinkie commie," or when he greets his son (Michael Sarrazin), returning from college with stylishly long hair, "You look just like a New York fairy," it's not ludicrous or comical, as the same lines would be if delivered by Archie Bunker.

Sometimes a Great Notion is not a bad movie, but it's not as good as it should have been. That's too bad, since it has so much potential.

But if you've got some spare time tonight, go see it. It's probably better than anything you might catch on TV.

Angelo State In Process of Re-building Program

by Dave Smedley

Angelo State University's football squad, the Rams, is in the process of rebuilding this year.

They lost 15 lettermen last year, but second-year coach James Cameron is confident the Rams will provide another exciting year of football. Cameron notes, "In the Lone Star Conference (which the school belongs to), it's unusual to lose that many players and then try to come back, but we have two of the best in the nation in Charlie Franklin and Thomas Williams."

ASU is sporting a new Pro-I offense with plenty of talented running backs. Gary Olivo, a sophomore, will start in the quarterback position. Joining Olivo in the backfield will be Bennie Wilson at wingback and Melvin DeBose at full-back. Wilson is ASU's No. 2 all-time rusher.

Charlie Franklin is the only offensive starter this year who saw full-time action last year. He was the leading rusher, receiver and scorer for the Rams last year.

Ten lettermen will start defensively. Freshman Kurt Newton and senior Larry Moore will go at the ends on the line with junior Garland Richards and senior Joe Keel set as tackles.

The linebacking work will be handled by sophomore Mickey Virdell, junior Tony Williams and senior Thomas Williams. The latter Williams is an All-America candidate and has gained All-Lone Star Conference honors each of the three seasons he's played.

All four of the Rams' starters in the defensive secondary are lettermen and three were regulars last season. Senior Harry Griffin and sophomores Jay Wimmer and Roy Holland all saw starting chores last season. Joe Byrne, another sophomore, was a top reserve last year.

The offensive line is heavily depleted from last year. Head coach Cameron notes, "we have several candidates for the line and they'll get a real test in our first three games — the toughest opening three contests in ASU's history."

ASU battled to a 7-7 tie last week with Central State University's Bronchos.

Club's Year Starts

by Kevin Carolan

The Letterman's Club held its first meeting of the 1973-1974 season last Monday night before a small gathering at the Milo Bail Student Center.

Coach Mike Palmisano opened the meeting by explaining the purpose of the Letterman's Club, which is to promote better athletics in the Omaha area, to instill a true spirit of sportsmanship, to assist the athletic department, to encourage enrollment of high school athletes at UNO, and to promote better relationships among athletic and academic organizations.

This is the third year the Letterman's Club has been in existence.

Both Chancellor Ronald Roskens and Athletic Director Clyde Biggers were present and made mention that the University is in need of a strong letterman's club. Athletic Director Clyde Biggers praised wrestling coach Mike Palmisano for his leadership in organizing such a club. Biggers said, "It is up to the board of officers to put the word out to other lettermen at the University to unite and strive to make the Letterman's Club a strong organization."

Chancellor Roskens said, "Those individual athletes who earn a letter have shown qualitative performance and should be proud of their organization." He is pleased with the progress of the athletic program at UNO and feels that the Letterman's Club is representative of this program.

There are approximately 80 lettermen in all sports at UNO.

The present project of the club is to raise money through a raffle which is presently underway throughout the campus. The prize is a racing bike valued at $175.00. The drawing will take place during halftime of the homecoming game against Northern Colorado on October 13.

The club will hold its next meeting on Monday, September 17th at 3:30 p.m. in room 101 of the Fieldhouse. All varsity athletes are urged to attend.

Harriers Go to Iowa State Proposal Liked

The UNO Cross Country Team travels to Ames, Iowa this weekend to participate in the Iowa State Cross Country Invitational Meet.

This will be the harriers first trip to Iowa State in a move to upgrade the cross country program at UNO. Head cross-country coach Lloyd Cardwell indicates the competition will be much stronger this week than at South Dakota last Saturday.

As was the case last week, the Jackrabbits from South Dakota State University will be favored to capture the meet championship. As a team, SDSU will probably match last week's showing of placing five runners in the top ten.

The meet, which is scheduled to start at 10:00 a.m., will be run over a four mile course.

The Mavericks will send a seven man contingent to Iowa

State led by sophomore distance ace, Jack Schroer. Schroer finished in sixth place last week with a time of 18 minutes, 11 seconds for the 3.7 mile abbreviated course. Others making the trip include co-captains Lance Herold and Tom Mahr; junior Greg Rosenbaum, and freshmen Bill Melton, Bob Garcia, and Joe Muir.

Assistant coach Jim McMahon feels all seven runners could improve over last week's finishers. A maximum effort will be needed to give the Mavericks a place among the top teams.

Those in contention at Iowa State include Northern Iowa, South Dakota State University, Western Illinois, William Penn College, Central College, Westmar, Nebraska Wesleyan, Loras (5th last year in NAIA) and host Iowa State.

Clyde Biggers, Athletic Director, said he is "really interested" in a proposal that may be put to the North Central Conference sometime this fall.

"My understanding is that a two-division North Central Conference will be proposed," Biggers explained. "Schools now talking about the proposal include Northern Michigan, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Akron and Youngstown."

Biggers reiterated that UNO will continue to look into all possibilities before making a commitment.

"I feel it all depends on the action taken by the NCAA Division II later in the year," Biggers explained. "The North Central Conference is below the other schools on grants-in-aid and I doubt a compromise can be made unless forced by the NCAA."

Maverick Football Staff Bolstered With Two Recent Coaching Additions

The UNO football staff received some additional help recently with the hiring of two new assistant coaches, Tom Dineen and Bill Nelson.

Dineen, who has 23 years of coaching experience behind him, retired after eight seasons as head football coach at Central High. He was recently granted permission to work with the Mavericks last spring.

Dineen and head coach Al Caniglia were football teammates at Creighton University prior to World War II.

Nelson, who played football at Kearney State was the coach of Gordon, Nebraska last season. Bill will work with the defensive backfield while Tom has charge of the offensive linemen.

"Hard work will move ball"

by Dave Coulton

"After watching the films, we're going to work hard on a combination to move the ball," said Coach Al Caniglia in relation to last week's loss to Jackson State.

Coach Caniglia also said, "I was pleased with the overall defense . . . they were on the field too long."

Caniglia also had encouraging words about the running backs, "The running backs ran pretty well for not having many places to run to."

Caniglia planned to do some scrimmaging during the week to work on some mistakes made last week. He's hopeful they won't make the mistakes tomorrow night.

An indication of the practice that has taken place came when Caniglia said, "when it rained this week we worked outside, we didn't move inside. We didn't handle the ball well in the rain last Saturday."

He was quick to point out that it was "no excuse" for the way UNO played.

Caniglia also indicated that the last time UNO won a conference championship they played at Emporia State during a downpour.

"We were behind 26-7 at halftime. The second half we came out and did what we had to do and won 27-26," Caniglia said.

"You should be able to play on wet, snowy or dry fields, the conditions are the same for both teams," he added.

"Unless it rains today and tomorrow the turf at Rosenblatt Stadium should be in good shape. Tomorrow's game against Angelo State should take place under good conditions."

Caniglia hopes that after this week's practice, tomorrow night they will have a "combination that clicks."
